

successful temporary worker program. When people are brought into a country to work, they put down roots. It is human nature. They raise a family and buy houses. They should do that. If we bring people into this country, however we might do that, and whether I lose this debate on the rational side of this or not, we ought to ensure that they do have an opportunity to become full-fledged American citizens and not create a second-class category of citizens here in the United States. That will build resentment. People who come here and live and work here, and do so legally, should have a path to citizenship. It should be an earned citizenship. They should respect and revere our laws and our history, but a second-class level of citizenship will be a wedge between us. It will pit people here in America against each other.

And a guest worker, temporary worker program sets up a lower class of residence, quasi-legal workers, but that does not guarantee that there will not be competing groups of illegal workers that are underbidding the guest workers. With guest workers, you have to make sure they are not putting too much pressure on the services, such as health care and education. If you do all of that, it raises the price of labor. They are going to want more money anyway because now they are legal and they have some options.

The people who come in to underbid that will be another wave of illegal workers, and that other wave will drive the price down even further.

So we must control our borders and insist that there is respect for our laws. We must look down range to the future and what America is going to look like in a generation or two. We must maintain our cultural continuity, respect the rule of law and make a prudent decision here, not one that is based upon the idea of we do not have any alternatives. We have many alternatives. We have 77.5 million non-working Americans. We have technology that we could develop. We could increase our birth rate, open up legal immigration for the skills that we need, and those are just some of the solutions that I can come up with. But, in fact, business is so creative, they can think of many, many more.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would express my appreciation for the privilege to address you and this United States House of Representatives.
